Foreword

NANAK began its journey in May, 2014 with small yet firm steps and resolve to make a difference in the lives of the people. Since then it has taken great leaps and has grown from its core in Delhi to have created and nurtured ten centers in rural and urban parts of the country. In the short time, its relentless effort and the committed stride has borne widespread results.

NANAK is committed to setting up integrated models of rural and urban development projects. It also acts as a resource platform for other development partners- connecting them and promoting their work; organizing knowledge sharing events and conferences; and working on knowledge creation and dissemination on development themes (particularly to foster the idea of inter-sectoral convergence).

2015-2016 saw swift progress- we now have 10 fully operating centres, 4 Community Libraries and Information Centres which we run/support; 212 people have been trained in Beauty & Wellness courses, and 90 in Stitching, Tailoring & Merchandising, 127 people have been trained in Computers and Digital Literacy, and 260 children have received free of cost remedial education.

The focus is on the following core themes:

- Education And Early Childhood Development
- Skills Training
- Convergence
- Women's Empowerment Through Capacity And Leadership Building
- Local Self-Governance

An overarching theme is village development. Besides these, we also hold regular health and hygiene workshops and advocacy efforts on the issues and concerns ranging from anti-alcoholism to protecting the environment.

NANAK firmly believes in a convergence-based approach, hence the National Forum of Action on Convergence (NFAC) is one of our unique initiative programmes. The idea of convergence is simple yet essential for substantive impact. It is to converge services, schemes, programmes such that they tackle the multi-dimensional nature of underdevelopment and the multi-dimensional nature of poverty. The effort is to not confine ourselves to a particular thematic area, but to address interrelated issues of education, health, poverty, gender discrimination, etc. Addressing issues in isolation to each other does not bear results, hence the convergence based approach.

We apply this approach to all our centres. For instance, in the remote village of Majhui in Sasaram, Bihar, we are running a primary school which is much more than a school for formal education. We believe in recognizing the potential of the school to act as a community hub, and tap on its potential to bring about a positive change in the village and its surrounding areas. This becomes even more important in rural and remote areas, where there is a severe lack of formal structures. So, we regularly hold awareness campaigns on social issues such as anti-alcoholism, health camps, tree-plantation drives for the entire village community. Through a partnership with READ India, we have built a Library and Information Centre within the school premises which is open to use for the entire village community after school hours.

Similarly, we have several Women's Empowerment centers which runs 6-month stitching, tailoring and merchandising, and beauty and wellness courses – Timarpur, Raipurchor, Dawath, Deo. We encourage women to use these centres as spaces to derive positive and constructive strength from each other and form self-help groups, collectively escalate gender issues to local Panchayats, etc. Mahila Samooh (Women collectives) are encouraged to take keen interest in ownership of the centre for sustainability of our projects. Apart from skills training, we regularly conduct workshops in personality development, health and hygiene, and talks on gender justice, women's empowerment, etc.

To develop the concept of Convergence and push for its inclusion in policy, NANAK publishes knowledge products and organizes several knowledge-sharing events including the the Annual Convergence ThinkFest- which has now become a unique USP of this organization.

For communications and advocacy, Gaon ki Selfie, NANAK's bi-monthly periodical is published which focuses on relevant themes such as good governance, women's empowerment. The periodical is bi-lingual and is widely circulated within the government and development sector in Delhi as well as in the rural areas where we already have our presence.

As we move towards a new year, we are aiming to focus on a new thematic area- strengthening local governance. In particular, we are working at strengthening female participation in local governance. There is a lack of awareness of the structure, powers, and functions of Panchayats as stipulated in the Constitution. While reservations for women in Panchayats has led to increased female Panchayat members, this is often only on paper and in reality the phenomenon of female proxy leaders is rampant. NANAK has recently launched a pilot project in two districts of Bihar- Aurangabad and Siwan, where we propose to run an awareness-generation campaign along with imparting training to increase effective female participation in Panchayats. (More on page xxx)

We would like to thank the NANAK team, in all its field offices and in Delhi, along with our partners and friends who have contributed to NANAK's endeavors, without whom it would not have been possible to take such strides. We look forward to bringing more positive change in society with the contribution and commitment.

Introduction

NANAK is a national organization, set up with a vision to harness the full potential of individuals and institutions through knowledge creation and dissemination with the goal of empowering the disadvantaged. NANAK aims to bring changes through micro and macro level changes (policy change), we combine direct action on the grassroot with aggregation of experiences which can inform policy action. While the primary movers of this organization are our rural communities at the grassroots in Bihar, and the urban poor of Delhi, and NCR region, the promoters, advisors and members of NANAK are a set of individuals who come with years of experience, competence, passion and commitment to bring about positive change in communities through a participatory approach. NANAK dedicates its efforts towards bridging the divide between government and communities, between various civil society groups and reaching out to the unreached. The major activities are highlighted below:

1. Advocacy, Knowledge Sharing and Capacity enhancement for Good Governance Practices – NANAK has set up a platform for promoting convergence action as an approach towards good governance. This is fostered through a programme called National Forum for Action on Convergence (NFAC). The programme has been initiated with a vision to make governance of social development programs and welfare schemes more effective and result oriented by institutionalizing convergence and enhancing participatory processes/ norms, and building capability and leadership at multiple levels. This is a resource platform that has emerged out of previous and ongoing initiatives aiming to strengthen convergence for social inclusion and gender justice. This initiative has brought together different stakeholders (experts, serving and retired civil servants, civil society organizations) to share experiences based on research, ground level actions to inform policy and bring useful insights for effective implementation and reach of government programs and services. It is also a platform for generating better understanding and fostering collective action on critical issues and emerging priorities such as sustainable livelihoods, violence against women, sanitation, financial inclusion and governance of social development programs and welfare schemes.

2. Promoting Value Based Quality Education

NANAK supports value based quality education primarily in rural area of Bihar for children of low income families. Dr.

RadhikaRaman Public School is a Flagship Initiative in Rural Education with a hub and spoke approach covering a cluster of villages in Sasaram in Bihar. This school supported by NANAK is committed to providing quality education and infrastructure to all children in the region and has adopted an innovative approach to education by combining computer education, audio-visual learning with the use of projectors and the teaching of values and morals in addition to the standard course curriculum to prepare a more skilled, responsible, and compassionate future generation for the nation. The organization also identifies girls from low income families who need financial support to continue their higher education and gives them mentoring support for higher education. One such recent successes has been getting 11 girls from very low income family enrolled in Engineering college in Bihar with fee waiver and part sponsorship from NANAK.

3. Women Empowerment

NANAK has set up a number of women empowerment centres in Bihar and UP to provide vocational training, awareness on health, hygiene and nutrition, legal literacy, counseling, collectivize women in Self Help Groups and build their capacities for income earning opportunities. The trainers help women from the disadvantaged community to collectively manufacture products and facilitate their marketing through participation in fairs and exhibitions. One of the pioneering initiatives at Rohtas district, Bihar has been the training and facilitation of women led SHGs into making hygienically produced, local nutritious food item of 'Sattu' packed in a professional manner. Through such enterprise women are trained to use their local skills and knowledge into income augmentation activities through which they can be economically empowered. This has also ushered in social empowerment of women in the region since the women SHGs are also taking up various social issues in a collective manner, such as anti-alcoholism, promoting the education of girl child, raising voice against domestic violence etc. Women from low income groups are trained in account keeping, branding, communication, pricing, customer interface etc by giving them exposure to exhibitions and fairs. Women from rural areas are provided rare opportunity to get first-hand experience in entrepreneurial development by exposure visit held from time to time. Self-defense training for women and girls has also been promoted for women and girls for enhancing safety and self-protection for the target area.

NANAK has partnered with PHD Chamber of Commerce Family Welfare Foundation to support its pioneering programme called 'ChaloGaon Ki Ore' which a holistic model of empowerment through women as key drivers of the change

4. Other Development Initiatives

NANAK also supports Environmental Promotion Initiatives through Tree plantation drives, Awareness Generation programs, and involving community in a community based sanitation approach. Major breakthrough in sanitation has been convincing community members in Bihar to participate in the government programme of building toilets under the Nirmal Bharat Abhiyan. Health care interventions also form a part of the focus area of intervention for the community in need. Awareness generation programmes for women and children have been taken up on a regular basis. In order to instill a sense of social responsiveness, children are encouraged to collectively take up social issues such as campaigns against child marriage, alcoholism and gender discrimination. Women are also given platforms for taking up social issues such as sanitation, hygiene, nutrition, etc. Special days such as teachers day, children's day, Gandhi jayanti etc are commemorated with special events in the rural areas where NANAK is has adopted a hub and spoke model.

5. Gaon Ki Selfie

NANAK has initiated a unique periodical by the name of Gaon Ki Selfie to give regular space to voices of women, children and other development sector partners from different states. It also focuses on different themes which are contemporary in nature with a view to draw the attention of different stakeholders including policy makers to the issues which need to be articulated and addresses.

National Forum for Action on Convergence.

NFAC is a unique initiative anchored by NANAK which serves as a resource platform that has emerged out of previous and ongoing initiatives aiming to strengthen convergence for social inclusion and gender justice. This initiative has brought together different stakeholders (experts, serving and retired civil servants, civil society organizations) to share their experiences based on research and ground level actions to inform policy and bring useful insights for the effective implementation and reach of government programs and services. It is also a platform for generating better understanding and fostering collective action on critical issues and emerging priorities such as sustainable livelihoods, violence against women, sanitation, financial inclusion, and governance of social development programs and welfare schemes

NFAC consists of eminent patrons, a national convener, regional conveners, thematic experts, and an executive body including a functional management team with its Head Office at Delhi. The Annual NFAC agenda is steered with expert advice and guidance by a National Experts, Resources and Advisors Group.

The legal entity which anchors this program is called 'Network and Alliance for Non-Profit Activities & Knowledge' (NANAK), a society registered under the Societies Registration Act, 1860.

VISION

To make governance of social development programs and welfare schemes effective and result-oriented by institutionalizing convergence and to achieve this in a collaborative manner by enhancing participatory processes/ norms, and building capability and leadership at multiple levels.

MISSION

Programmes- Thematic Areas

Education

- Early Childhood Development
- Remedial Classes
- School
- Library and Information Centre
- Sports and Extra-Curricular Activities

Education is a core theme in NANAK's work. Our projects, trainings and workshops look into early childhood development, adult literacy, and remedial education particularly for students from under-privileged backgrounds, information access, knowledge sharing, etc.

"Children are the foundation of sustainable development. The early years of life are crucial not only for individual health and physical development, but also for cognitive and social-emotional development. Events in the first few years of life are formative and play a vital role in building human capital, breaking the cycle of poverty, promoting economic productivity, and eliminating social disparities and inequities."

- UNICEF

In several parts of the country, children need home-tutoring and personalized attention. Many, especially those from socio-economically backward sections of society cannot afford this. To support such children in the studies, with an aim of making them more independent, NANAK runs remedial classes in several of its centres including Bishunpur, Majhui, Deo, etc.

We also recognize that in small places, particularly remote rural villages, education centres become community hubs. Our aim is to capitalize on this and this is why we seek to bring about positive behavioral change in an entire village community through a school. The primary school we have set up in Majhui, Bihar is a case in point. As described below, we have set up a Library and Information Centre at the school- open to the entire village community after school hours. We also regularly organize plantation drives, health drives, aware-ness campaigns, marches, etc at the school and workshops and training that are open to the entire village to attend.

1) Dr Radhika Raman Public School

Dr. Radhika Raman Public School started on 2nd of April 2014 at Majhui village, registered under the Sarva Shiksha Abhiyaan, it aims to provide low cost and high quality holistic education and personal development to the children of Sasaram. The school was established by the joint effort of the DrRadhika Raman Trust and the Network and Alliance for Non-Profit Activity and Knowledge (NANAK). Located at Majhui Village, the school is open to all sections of society and takes classes from Standard LKG-VI.

The school offers children in the area the following facilities, at a very nominal token fees-

- Community Library and Information Centre: Through a partnership with READ India and Takshika Educational Society, a fully-equipped and technologically advanced Library and Information Centre has been set up within the school premises. The library includes a range of books on different subjects and for all age-groups, computers, tablets, internet, along with a trained librarian for support. Library periods are included in students timetables and all students are encouraged to form a habit of reading. After school hours, the Library and Information Centre is open to all people from Majhui and neighbouring villages.
- Early Childhood Development Centre (ECD): The ECD provides a fun and active learning environment for children from LKG and UKG. It is a colourful learning space with educational toys and books, and is supported by an ECD instructor and facilitator trained in early childhood care and education. The ECD has been set up in collaboration with READ India.
- Transport: Transport/linkages for all students from Majhui as well as neighbouring villages at a nominal cost.
- Audio-Visual Classes: Innovative teaching and learning material and our classes are interactive with special focus on audio-visual learning through projector/computers. The school also shows educational movies to students and villagers every Saturday.
- Computer training: All students have the opportunity to attend computer classes under the guidance of a trained teacher.
- Extra-Curricular: Students are encouraged to explore and discover their creative passions. Timetables include lessons in music, dance, art, physical education, reading, etc. We also regularly hold events, competitions and marches/drives on social and environmental issues, for instance a tree plantation drive on World Environment day, special assemblies on Independence Day, etc.
- Community cultural events: Cultural events for the entire village and school community. In the past these have included International Women's Day celebration, Teachers Day, Independence Day, etc.
- Community awareness-generation programs: Community-awareness generation programs for the benefit of village residents. These include health camps, anti-alcoholism drives, hygiene workshops, educational workshops, awareness camps by Banks and government partners.
- Exposure Visits for Students and Teachers: Meritorious children and children of senior classes, as well as teachers, are given opportunities to travel to other states and get leadership training/personality development training
- Support for Higher Education: Children connected to the school, including their siblings, are facilitated to enroll for higher education/technical education (such as engineering, medicine, etc) Scholarships are provided for need-based cases to make technical education affordable

2) Support to SheelKunj Community School Mobile Creche and Learning Centre For Children Of Construction Workers

NANAK is supporting a mobile crèche for children of construction workers in Meerut, Uttar Pradesh. The centre gives a chance for children of construction workers to holistic development. Construction workers work long hours under physically stressful conditions, earn minimal wages, and are vulnerable to exploitation- this makes it difficult to devote time to their children, especially in their early childhood care. The first few years of the development of the child is very critical as it affects the physical and motor development of children.

NANAK is providing technical and gap-filling support through resource persons, experts, and learning aid to the project, with partner SheelKunj Community School. The centre has two teachers, one male and one female. So far 40 students have been given remedial education through this project.

3) Durgawati Learning Centre

The Durgawati Learning Centre is located in Kirpalpur village, Kaimur District, Bihar. Kirpalpur has a total population of about 840 (Census, 2011). NANAK opened the centre on 2nd October 2015, with support from Taskhila Education Society (TES). The centre provides free-of-cost remedial classes for children in the area. The centre also runs 6-month computer courses at a nominal cost. The centre currently has 8 computers and a trained computer teacher.

The teacher running remedial classes has an MA in Sociology. The centre was made substantial progress and so far provided remedial education to around 70 students in the area. There is an ongoing demand from other students in the area to attend these remedial classes, and NANAK is exploring the option of hiring an additional trainer and running two sets of classes, contingent on resources.

4) Bishunpur Learning Centre

Bishunpur is a small village of approximately 800 people located in the outskirts (around one kilometer away) of the Majhui village in Sasaram, Bihar. The village predominantly comprises of people who are socio-economically backward (Census, 2011), nearly all from the OBC Bond caste. The majority of villagers survive on agriculture and livestock, with a few inhabitants also involved in the weaving industry. A section of the villagers are engaged in weaving, and supply carpets etc via middlemen. These villagers are not attached to any government weaving scheme, nor do they have registered ID card. Adding to the lack of education, there is a lack of awareness of basic entitlements and rights as well as government schemes.

There is a dire need in the village for good education as well as increasing connectivity to jobs in the formal sector.

Keeping this in mind, NANAK established the Bishunpur Learning Centre (the only facility of its kind in the village) on 17 February 2014, which runs remedial classes for children in the area, and also has a library open to village residents for use. Classes run from Monday to Saturday from three to five 'o'clock, and a majority of student are between the ages of three and ten. A trained teacher, who holds a Bachelors in Education conducts classes. A key component of the classes is moral and civic education, lessons in personal hygiene, and personality development. NANAK also placed a small library with coaching books for competitive exams.

In January 2016, NANAK conducted a monitoring and evaluation visit to Bishunpur. A public meeting was held with local stakeholders to assess the state and progress of the centre.

Some of the observations made on the village in general by interacting with various members of the community were:

- Most of the village is uneducated
- It is difficult for students to go to government/private schools in neighbouring areas during the rainy season
- The hygiene conditions in the village are abysmal, particularly personal hygiene, shelter and clothing.
- A section of the villagers are engaged in weaving. However they do not have registered ids nor are they connected to governments schemes for weavers and artisans

5) Support to Savera Learning Centre for Children

NANAK supports the Savera Learning Centre in Delhi, which serves children from underprivileged background in Delhi. The centre has 41 children aged 8-14 years. NANAK also resolves to provide the centre with learning material and resources such as computer, books, training and workshops for teachers.

6) Support to Amrapali Community Library and Information Centre

NANAK contributes funds to a Community Library and Information Centre run by Amrapali Cultural Foundation in Delhi. The funds go towards buying books in higher education/organizing workshops on topics of social relevance/support to students for higher education. NANAK regularly conducts monitoring and evaluation trips to the centre, including one in January 2016.

Convergence

At the micro- level NANAK has several projects in rural and urban areas. However, at the macro-level, NANAK aims at affecting the development sector by institutionalizing the idea of convergence. (Read more on NANAK's programme the National Forum for Action on Convergence on page 5)

Livelihood Development

- 6 month low- cost courses in : a) Computers b) Stitching, Tailoring and Merchandising c) Beauty and Wellness
- Creating rural micro-enterprise models
- Personality development workshops
- English- speaking workshops
- Workshops in interview skills and CV writing
- Job fairs
- Career counseling with recruiters

NANAK rural centres, as also the urban centre at Timarpur, provide courses in computer, beauty and wellness, and stitching, tailoring, and merchandising. These are 6-month courses that are primarily aimed at people from disadvantaged backgrounds. There is a focus on developing entrepreneurial skills and connecting trainees to jobs following the courses. Details of these centres are given below.

1) Timarpur Skills Training Centre

In collaboration with TATA Power and PHD Family Welfare Foundation, NANAK set up a training centre with beautician classes and computer classes on 1st January 2016. The centre has high-quality infrastructure with air conditioners, water coolers and eleven computers. The centre is particularly aimed at people from socio-economically backwards sections of the community. Upon completion of the courses, trainees get certified by the Jan Shiksha Sansthan, a Central Government certifying body. The certificate will help students raise their value in the job market. The centre has two trainers and a project coordinator, and runs 6-month certificate classes. The centre is running full classes with many aspiring trainees registering for the next set of classes later in the year. Currently, 80 trainees are enrolled in beauty and wellness training while 75 in computer classes. Classes also have a component on gender-sensitivity, English speaking, personality development, and connecting 70% of trainees to jobs.

The Centre also acts as a focal point in the area for NANAK to conduct awareness-raising programmes, job fairs, and training workshops. These focus on health, hygiene, personality-development, English speaking skills, awareness on social issues, etc. For instance, in partnership with the PHD Family Welfare Foundation, NANAK facilitated a health and hygiene camp attended by over 250 people at the centre in early January 2016. Additionally, we have held multiple personality-development courses in January and February 2016.

We are also exploring the option of a self-defence workshop in the near future.

2) Deo Women's Empowerment Centre

The Deo Centre for Women's Empowerment is being supported by NANAK since August 2015. It runs classes institching, tailoring and merchandising and beauty and wellness at a nominal cost. There is also an emphasis on the role of the centre in acting as a hub for women to gather, mobilise, share problems, escalate their issues to Panchayats and find strength in number.

Deo Centre has been fully equipped with necessary beauty and wellness and stitching, tailoring and merchandising equipment, and four computers. Products from the centre A field mission to the centre was undertaken by NANAK in January 2016. A total number of six monitoring and evaluation visits were undertaken in the year.

The centre will be starting a community library and information centre along with an early childhood development centre, in partnership with READ India, at the end of March 2016.

3) Raipur Women's Empowerment Centre

NANAK started the Raipur Women's Empowerment Centre in Raipur village, Sasaram, Bihar in October 2015. The Centre aims at empowering women by helping them in becoming financially independent, and by facilitating the creation of women's self-help-groups. The Centre provides 6-month courses in beautician training and stitching, tailoring, and merchandising.

NANAK has fully equipped and staffed the Centre, with support from PHD Family Welfare Foundation. Two trainers have been employed, one each in beauty and wellness and one for stitching, tailoring and merchandising. The Centre provides these training to women, particularly those from disadvantaged background, at a nominal fee. The trainers are actively trying to mobilise women in the area to come together and form self-help-groups. There is also an effort to promote self-sustaining micro-enterprise for women in local foodstuffs and other locally-produced handicrafts products. NANAK is also exploring ways to market clothing products from the stitching, tailoring and merchandising classes.

A key component of this project is also to build the capacity and leadership skills of women, so that they can better act as community leaders and bring gender issues to the forefront.

4) Durgawati Learning Centre

Apart from remedial education, the Durgawati centre also provides 6-month certificate courses in computers. The centre has eight fully-functioning computers and a computer teacher qualified with an Advanced Diploma in Computer Application and a Masters in Economics. For more information on the centre, refer to page...

5) Dawath Facilitation Centre

Dawath is located in Rohtas, Bihar. The Dawath Facilitation Centre was started by NANAK in on 7 April 2015. It organized short-term course in computer training and beautician training. NANAK conducted a monitoring and evaluation visit to the centre in September 2015. So far the centre has trained 12 girls in beauty and wellness, and seven in computers. Two girls from Dawath Facilitation Centre were given the opportunity to attend a 17-day long training programme under Sandarshika (details on page...). A batch of 8 girls were mobilized to participate in the Women's Day Programme at village Majhui, and also take part in a friendly Kabaddi match between the girls from village Majhui and village Dawath.

Strengthening Local Self-Governance

1) Increasing and Enhancing Female Political Participation in Panchayats – A Pilot Project in Siwan and Aurangabad Panchayats or village councils are a historic phenomenon in South Asia. In India, political power has been devolved to the local level through the institutionalization

However, over time people the nature of Panchayats appears to be changing. A pertinent challenge is also the lack of female participation in Panchayats. Through an amendment in 1992, the 73rd amendment, the Constitution stipulates that 50% of seats in Panchayats are reserved for women. While this has increased female members and heads, in reality most of these are proxy leaders.

NANAK, in partnership with Takshila Education Society launched the 'Increasing and Enhancing Female Political Participation in Panchayats' project in February 2016. This was preceded by two workshops organized through NFAC at Delhi and Patna where a number of civil society organisations and experts participated and shared their views. Based on the suggestions received a plan was developed to give focused attention in a campaign mode to awareness-raising on the subject and enhancing women's participation.

Dr Chandra Shekhar Pran, who is an expert on Panchayats and is the founder of the Teesri Sarkar programme, is one of the leading resource persons for this project. The aim of the project is to increase and enhance effective female political participation in Panchayats. This will be done in three main ways: 1) Awareness-generation 2) Building capacity and leadership skills 3) Providing resource material

A systematic awareness-raising campaign is being conducted where information about the Constitutional structure, functions, and powers of Panchayats is being disseminated to villagers in the two districts. In conjunction with this, training in gender-sensitivity will be undertaken to bring about a change in patriarchal mentality that permeates into the political sphere and reflects in its power structure.

The process was kicked off in February through a mission visit to Siwan, Bihar for the purpose of holding a workshop with villagers on recognizing Panchayats as a "third government", and also to conduct an initial baseline research and survey. At TES's Parivartan complex, Dr Chandra shekhar Pran spoke to a gathering of local stakeholders, comprising panchayat heads, husbands of female panchayat heads, women opinion leaders, students, etc. belonging to the area. There was a strong demand amongst women for similar workshops in their own neighbouring villages, and the following day Dr Pran along with the President of TES Mr Sanjiv Kumar travelled to neighbouring villages to conduct similar workshops.

In order to initiate and build the project, NANAK has mobilized a resource team from Aurangabad and Patna comprising enterprising women opinion leaders and social workers. These women, along with NANAK's Programme Associate and Programme Analyst attended and coordinated the trainings, and the first workshop in Aurangabad will be organized by NANAK in the end of March 2016.

Leadership and Capacity Building for Women's Empowerment

As mentioned in the Livelihood Skills Development section (pg ...) NANAK runs several women's empowerment centre that provide skills training and act as a space for community mobilization. All of NANAK's centres, projects, and campaigns have a component on strengthening gender equality- for instance, at all centres there are sessions and workshops on gender sensitivity. NANAK has also initiated multiple advocacy and information-generation campaigns in rural and urban areas on women's empowerment, research and published knowledge products, as well as anchored knowledge sharing and dissemination events on the same.

The aspect related to the capacity development of women has been given a name called Sandarshikawhich literally means a 'women who can navigate' and a detailed illustration of this component is given below:

Sandarshika

NANAK's programme encourages women participation in skills development leading to livelihood generation but also inculcates leadership qualities and life skills in them. One of the first trainings undertaken under this programme was to guide women belonging to low socio-economic backgrounds to realize their dreams of self-reliance and financial independence by helping them benefit from skills development initiatives, which would ultimately brighten their chances of getting connected to income generating opportunities. Under the aegis of this project NANAK and Bird Academy (a premier training institute dealing in courses related to tourism and hospitality industry) entered into an understanding to customize a short duration course for carefully initiating a batch of raw youth into an untrodden arena. In the first phase of this programme, NANAK nominated 26 candidates from economically weaker sections and girls were drawn from LWE affected areas of Rohtas District and its adjacent areas in Bihar and also from vulnerable areas of Uttar Pradesh and Delhi. The first phase was spread over 17 days with intensive training sessions of 85 hours involving theory, practicals, interactive sessions and exposure visits. The candidate selection was based on their willingness to learn special skills and knowledge associated with the trade, as well as education till Higher Secondary. The objective was to sharpen the skills of these beginners and to encourage them to move ahead by equipping them with skills to become industry- ready and get gainfully employed. The Delhi Police also organized special self-defense classes for the candidates which lent wholesomeness to the entire curriculum.

Well known resource persons were invited to brief the candidates on issues varying from self-help-group formations to social media strategies to basics of camera handling.

Highlights:

1. A major breakthrough in sanitation has been convincing community members in and around Majhui to participate in the government programme of building toilets under the Nirmal Bharat Abhiyaan.
2. NANAK Celebrated International Women's Day on 8th March 2015 at Majhui village. On that day, the Member of Parliament from the area, Mr Cheddi Paswan was the chief guest. More than 2000 people from the community, including over 50% women and girls participated actively in the programme which saw demos of self-defense as also kabaddi match of girls from Majhui village with girls who were invited to play from village Dawath.
3. Promoting Higher Education of Girls- The Director of SITYOG Institute of Technology Aurangabad announced that with NANAK, they would sponsor 8 girls for engineering degrees at their university with complete/partial sponsorship.

Gaon ki Selfie

Gaon ki Selfie is NANAK's bi-monthly periodical. It attempts to bring rural and urban perspectives on development issues at one platform.

The Gaon ki Selfie theme song, sung by Padmashri Nominee Malini Awasthi, was released on January 27th 2016, by the Minister of Railways Sh. Suresh Prabhu, along with NANAK President Ms Rashmi Singh, and Ms Vartika Nanda. It took place book launch event for 'Road to Rights- Women, Social Security and Protection in India' organised by the Programme on Women's Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, in collaboration with the NANAK-NFAC. Ms Rashmi Singh spoke on convergence of social security schemes for women in India- her chapter on the same can be found in the book.

Looking to the Future

In a short span of time and with relatively limited resources, NANAK has managed to launch operations and establish itself as an active change-maker. Our thematic areas include education and early childhood development, skills training, leadership and capacity building for women's empowerment, and convergence.

The coming year will be full of plenty of work however, with existing interventions to be sustained and expanded and new initiatives to be taken up. NANAK is putting emphasis on creating drivers of change, particularly women, through leadership development and other kind of support. NANAK is also putting a focus on self-sustainability to break existing cycles of dependency that are prone to get created in development aid and operations. There is an effort to increase activities in micro-enterprise and create revenue models for certain existing models such that they are able to generate their own funds. We are looking to explore further partnerships and collaborations with like-minded organisations to channelize our collective resources present and future initiatives.
